Sheriff warns frats about sales to minors

Maryville Sheriff John Middleton and Chief Deputy Danny Estes attended the Inter Fraternity Council meeting Sept. 18 to discuss fraternity parties and the issue of selling alcohol to minors.

IFC President Brad Dusenbery said the sheriff indirectly warned all fraternities about the parties and against selling alcohol to minors.

"He warned us all that if the police department got a complaint, he would investigate the call and do whatever it took to take care of the problem," Dusenbery said.

Middleton said that the fraternities were just told what would happen if he continued to get complaints.

"The kids get the cars parked around yards and they end up in the yards," Middleton said. "It was more of a warning than anything else."

Dusenbery also said that IFC does not recognize alcohol and that there were no rules or major decisions passed on whether to continue having parties.

"We just left it up to each individual chapter," he said.

Despite the sheriff's warnings, four fraternities had parties last Saturday night and none experienced any difficulties with the sheriff or police.

"We had a party scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights, but we canceled the Friday party to adhere to their wishes," said Steve Brightwell, Tau Kappa Epsilon president.

"We haven't had any complaints from our neighbors around here. We felt like we had a good working relationship with our neighbors."

Alpha Kappa Lambda President Paul Battalion said, "It made us more cautious. We weren't going to have our party, but we had planned it on Saturday and with rush going on, we thought it was necessary to have it."

Phi Sigma Epsilon member, Chuck Fast said although they had a party at the Legion Hall, they did not think about the warning because they were not selling beer.

"Everything stayed pretty calm and we did not have a bit of a problem," he said.

Pat Beary, Sigma Tau Gamma president, also said they were not worried about the party warning.

"We talked about it and decided we were just going to go ahead and have it," Beary said. "We've been lucky to have good neighbors, so we kept it quiet and kept things picked up."

1450 attend Parents' Day

Parents and family members of NWMSU students were given the opportunity to meet and visit with administrators and instructors and to familiarize themselves with the campus on Parents' Day last Saturday.

"We estimate that 1450 parents, from as far away as Florida and New Jersey, participated in the program," said Phil Hayes, chairman.

The day began with registration in the Fine Arts Building. Utilizing faculty and the Sigma Society members,

Freshmen kick off office campaigns

Campaigns for three freshman offices kicked off Tuesday night, following a rules meeting explaining campaign rules to those running for offices.

Amy Lawrence and Daniel Marin are seeking the position of freshman president, while Bonnie Schofield is the only freshman running for one of two class Senate seats. Elections will be held Sept. 30. The polls will be open at the Student Union from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Joe Pickard, president of Student Senate, said that he had expected a larger number of candidates at the rules meeting, but that many possible candidates were scared to run for an office because they too had expected more competition.

"I had a feeling there would be a lot more running," he said. "They must have gotten scared off. That is the only logical reason I can think of."

Pickard however said that it is not too late for other freshmen to join the races for offices.

Any freshman may run for an office, and no forms must be filled out. These people can be placed as a write-in candidate on the ballots. To avoid being disqualified at a discrepancy meeting, Pickard said he advises anyone seeking one of the three positions as a write-in candidate to pick up a list of Student Senate election rules at the Student Senate office in the Student Union. Pickard said there is a good possibility that a write-in candidate, with an organized campaign, could win any of the three positions.

Students turn out for voter registration

Student Senate has registered about 212 students during Monday and Tuesday, as they attempt to register 30 percent of NWMSU's students in a voter registration drive.

Dave Hart, Student Senate vice president, said that 137 students were registered Monday, and 75 were registered Tuesday. The registration tables will also be open Thursday in the Annex from 4-6 p.m.

Dave Snedeker, chairman of the Student Affairs Committee, said he is pleased with the turnout.

"As a whole, it's going very well," he said. "It seems the students are taking an active part. Generally, I'm very happy with the turnout. I'm surprised at the number of students already registered."

Snedeker said, however, that the Senate probably has not reached their goal of registering 30 percent of those students not already registered. But, he said, probably 30 percent of all students are registered, through other organizations' efforts, as well as Senate's.

Joe Pickard, Student Senate president, said there is a possibility that the voter registration drive may be continued next week for one or two days.

Bush discusses construction

An informal meeting to discuss the construction projects underway on campus was held Wednesday under the direction of Dr. Robert Bush, vice president of environmental affairs.

Plans, diagrams and artist's sketches for the new Performing Arts Center and the library were looked at. The drawings not only showed the structures, but where the new parking lots will be.

"We are still working on the shop drawings for the Performing Arts Center," Bush said. "But bids should still go out by the end of October."

Bids will not be opened until the spring, Bush said.

"There are about 200 shop drawings because everything is so complex," Steve Easton director of technical services, said.

The library will have a smoking lounge available, audiovisual materials, a study lounge which will be opened even when the regular library is not, and there will be space to hold small concerts or lectures.

"The library, which has an unorthodox shape, will not be just for the students," Bush said. "It will serve the community as well."

Work on the Administration Building is also continuing.

"Pool and Canfield have estimated they will need 300 days to complete their work on the Ad Building, which puts the completion date sometime in June," Bush said.

It had been hoped by some that the building would be ready by next fall, but Bush said that is not very realistic.

"We would be very hardput to finished by next September," Bush said. "We literally have to treat every inch of the building."

Greeks examine hazing

By Tom Ibarra and Kelly Hamilton

With all the national publicity hazing has recently attracted, college campuses across the nation are becoming more aware of the needless deaths and injuries resulting from hazing.

According to an article by Chuck Bauclein in the college magazine Nutshell, in the past two years, a dozen college students have been needlessly killed in hazing incidents related to fraternity initiation rites.

Bruce Wiseman was struck by an automobile last January and killed while walking blindfolded across a highway during Theta Xi initiation rites at Louisiana State University.

Randall Crustels died after being struck in the head by shrapnel from a cannon's explosion during an initiation rite at the University of Missouri's Kappa Alpha Chapter, Sept. of 1977.

Deaths related to hazing can happen on any college campus with fraternities and sororities, and that includes Northwest Missouri State University. There are six fraternities and five sororities on campus and the hazing situation varies in each organization. The definition of hazing also varies.

"Hazing is anything that causes physical or mental stress," Tau Kappa Epsilon President Steve Brightwell said. "I think there's a type of hazing in all organizations. Hazing is just a word they've attached to fraternities."

Brian Cunningham, Delta Chi president, said he thought hazing was anything that causes physical or mental anguish and also anything that separates a pledge from an active.

Tim Albers, Phi Sigma Epsilon president, described hazing as basically making anybody do what they don't want to do.

As for actual hazing, both the Delta Sigma Phi and Alpha Kappa Lambda fraternities have declared the elimination of hazing from their pledge programs.

"We don't have physical hazing," AKL president Paul Battalion said. "We got rid of it because it served no purpose."

"The actives were used to hazing and when we dropped it, it was hard for them, but now they're used to it," said Craig Peters, Delta Sigma Phi member.

The remaining four fraternities have not totally abolished hazing, but each said they had greatly reduced it.

"Hazing has slackened off in the last two years," Sigma Tau Gamma said. "We've reduced almost all of our physical hazing in our pledgship," Albers said. "Now we're trying to concentrate on how to make them good actives."

Among the reasons for cutting down on hazing were pressure from nationals, wanting to make pledges better actives than pledges and the general attitudes of the pledges.

"Our nationals have taken a real tough stance on hazing," Cunningham said. "They're really stressing it now and have definite written rules against it."

"Everybody wanted to get rid of hazing, even some of the guys that went through it," Battalion said. "It progressed to a point of ridiculous and then went down farther and farther."

The overwhelming reason for wanting to maintain hazing was tradition, but there were also other reasons.

"Some guys want it because they want pledges to respect them and they operate under the principle of the newcomer has to prove himself worthy," Brightwell said.

Since the pro-hazers are declining, different type of pledgeships are going into effect, with the emphasis on other things besides hazing.

"Pledgeship is a process to get those guys to know us and know each other," Battalion said. "Pledgeship makes them friends and that's what we want. Grades are real important, so we're stressing more and more academics."

"Our pledgeship is a lot more directed at education," Cunningham said. "We want to teach them better study habits, parliamentary procedure and things that are going to be important when they get in an organization."

"With first-semester freshmen coming in, we realize teaching them how to study is important," Albers said.

Many of the new pledges this fall are freshmen and there has been discussion on whether they should be allowed to pledge their first semester. Although hazing has been a controversial subject with the fraternities recently, most of the fraternity men felt hazing wasn't a major concern in the mind of a freshman rushee.

"It's in their minds but they're more concerned with their grades," Brightwell said. "They have a fear about grades and the time factor."

"I don't think they think about it at all," Cunningham said. "Grades and finances are their only considerations."

Freshman Larry Olinger, who pledged a fraternity this fall, said, "I mainly heard about hazing from the other guys that are pledging with me."

When asked if the thought of hazing scared him or was influential in his decision, Olinger said, "It scares me a little bit because of mainly not knowing what it is. Hazing had no influence on my decision. I was just thinking about being in and all the good points."

An added general feeling among the fraternities was that some freshmen got a lot of preconceived ideas about hazing and fraternities from various sources,

News Briefs

Dance to be held Oct. 11

A dance will be held Homecoming instead of the usual concert. The dance will feature the "Rumbles" from 8:30 to 11 p.m. Oct. 11. Students will be admitted for $1.50 with an activity card. A proposal was passed by the Student Union Board that will allocate funds to sponsor a spring concert, Phil Klaussen, SUB president said.

Hearing tests available

Persons needing the services of a licensed audiologist can contact the NWMSU Speech and Hearing Clinic.

The University has the services of two licensed audiologists to serve the needs of the area, said Larry Floyd, assistant professor of speech.

Kent Webb has been added to the clinic's staff on a part-time basis and will be testing hearing on Wednesdays from 2 to 6 p.m. in the Communications Building.

James Powell, a licensed audiologist, will also be on campus to test hearing on Thursdays from 3 to 6 p.m.

Fees for the tests are $5, but Floyd emphasized that no one will be turned away because of financial limitations. Individuals interested in these services should contact Doni Fry, 582-7141, ext. 1361 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Films shown on Mondays

The Nodaway Arts Council Monday Night Film Series will present Waterhip Down at 7:30 Sept. 29. On Oct. 6 the Council will feature Alfred Hitchcock's suspense classic North By Northwest. The films will be shown in the Maryville Public Library basement.

'Exit the King' debuts Oct. 2

The theater department's performance of "Exit the King" will be at 8 p.m. Oct. 2 through 4 in the Charles Johnson Theater.

Admission is free to students with an activity tickets. Adult admission will be $1.50 and 75 cents for children.

Tickets may be ordered by phoning 582-7141, ext. 1325 or 1171.

Harambee sponsors show

A talent show sponsored by Harambee will be held October 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Spanish Den. A semi-formal dance with refreshments will follow. Everyone is invited to attend.

Foreign students hold dinner

"A night in the Orient" will be held Sept. 28 at 5:00 p.m. to 7:30 in the Spanish Den snack bar. The cost will be $5 for an adult and $3 for children under 12. Tickets are available at the Citizens State Bank or at the office of Bill Disney, foreign student advisor.

'Festival' to play for benefit

NWMSU Students for Anderson have announced that Festival will perform a John Anderson Benefit Concert Oct. 8 at the Golden Spike Disco, east side of the Square. Showtime is 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. Admission is $3.50 for all the draw beer you can drink, also reduced prices on mixed drinks. Door prizes include a raffle for free T-shirts and records.

Portraits to be taken

Dates for Yearbook portraits have been announced by Carol Crum, Tower Editor. Seniors, Faculty and Graduate student portraits will be taken on Oct. 13-17 at 8:30 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. in the Blue Room, third floor, Student Union.

All undergraduate portraits will be taken on Oct. 27-31 from 8:30 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. in the Blue room. Group and organization portraits will be taken on Oct. 21-22, from 6:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. in Horace Mann. On Oct. 23 these pictures will be taken from 5:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. in Horace Mann.

Appointments for sittings will be taken Sept. 29 through Oct. 10, Monday through Friday, from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. by calling ext. 1225. After 5:00 p.m., call 582-4789.

Saucerman publishes article

Dr. Jim Saucerman, professor of English, has had an article, "A Critical Approach to Plains Poetry," published in the August issue of "Western American Literature," the quarterly journal of the Western Literature Association.

Saucerman discusses the impact of landscape (topography) in poetry written by Ray Young Bear, Clarice Short and Thomas Hornsby Ferril.

His thesis is that the Western landscape gives these writers a sense of their own worth and strength, which is evident in their poems. His view thus opposes the thought that the immensity of the west would diminish the individual.

Saucerman has been a member of the Northwest faculty since 1962. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Missouri.

Tryouts to be held

Tryouts for the 1980-81 wrestling cheerleaders will be held Sept. 30, at 7:30.

High school presents play

"You Can't Take It With You" will be presented by Maryville High School on Oct. 24 and 25. Dinner theater tickets for prime rib and play are on sale for $7. General admission tickets are $2. For tickets and information call the Maryville High School speech department.

Food committee to meet

The Food Service Committee will meet at 5 p.m. Sept. 29 in the east side of the Union cafeteria. The meeting is for representatives, but everyone is welcome.

Swine win awards

The NWMSU swine herd won awards last week in the annual Nodaway County Pork Producers Association show.

The herd captured the championship in the barrows and gilts live class for adults with a 245-pound Duroc-Yorkshire entry. Another University entry placed second in this class.

In carcass judging, a University entry placed second. Dr. Harold Brown, associate professor of agriculture, was in charge of the entries. Nearly 40 hogs were entered in the adult and youth classes.

Kharadia in "Who's Who"

Dr. V.C. Kharadia, professor of economics, has been included in the 17th edition of "Who's Who in the Midwest."

Individuals are selected for biographical record on the basis of their outstanding achievement in a particular field. In addition, the individual "must have accomplished some conspicuous achievement--something that distinguished him from the vast majority of his contemporaries."

Kharadia has been a faculty member since 1973. He received the rank of professor of economics in 1977 and was named economics department chairman in 1979. He holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Baroda, India, and master's and Ph.D. degrees in economics and finance from the University of Illinois. He is also a member of the American Finance Association.

IRC works on Phillips problems

Through its new "Proposals and Complaints" committee, the Inter Residence Council (IRC) has worked with Phillips Hall to solve some of its hall problems.

Phillips had storage and water leakage problems that needed to be dealt with, said Haven Hisey, IRC president.

"We went to the administration and asked for changes," Hisey said.

She said Phillips Hall budget was $500 in the hole at the beginning of the school year. IRC asked if Phillips Hall could start clean with a $422.70 IRC allocation and have housing absorb the debt. Housing agreed, only if Phillips

Hall sets up a budget and works well as a team to improve the residence hall.

"I'm really proud of all we've gotten done together," Hisey said. A prerequisite of getting help from "Proposal and Complaints" is that the hall must be willing to work with the committee. "Phillips just did great and together we got it done," she said. IRC has also asked housing to take action on getting ice machines for each hall.

"Bidding for five new ice machines is in the process right now," Hisey said. "They should be in by the end of the semester."

"We're making sure that residence halls are running at peak efficiency to the benefit of all its residents," Hisey said.

Campus hosts Scout camp

A Pony Express Council Boy Scout Camporee will be held on Sept. 26-28 at NWMSU.

Dr. Robert Bush, vice president for environmental affairs and local coordinator for the camporee, said between 400 and 500 Boy Scouts from Northwest Missouri and Northeast Kansas will participate in the three-day event. In addition, troop leaders and other interested adults will be present.

The camporee will locate its living units in an area west of the High Rise Residence Hall Complex.

Bush said the theme for the camporee will be "University Life."

"What we hope to accomplish is to give the Scouts a feel for life on a university campus. The participants will have contact with University students and faculty and will experience some aspects of university living," Bush said.

University students will fill leadership roles in the camporee. Enrichment seminars will be presented to the scouts and their leaders, including computer science, music, journalism, agriculture, mechanics, aviation, industrial arts, food preparation, geology and other disciplines. Faculty members will supervise students in their departments, who will conduct the seminars.

In addition, the scouts will be involved in several events--the best camp site, camp cleanliness and athletics.

The Pony Express Council's Mic-O-Say dancers will perform and the Missouri National Guard will present exhibits and displays. Each participating Scout will receive a shoulder patch from the council. The patch was designed by Jane Kemp, coordinator of publications at the University.

Special seminars and workshops concerning leadership, interpersonal relations and motivation will be presented by University students and faculty to scoutmasters and adult leaders. All the troops in the council can participate by registering through their scout master.

Stotler wins best debater at tourney

Four members of the NWMSU debate team traveled to Western Illinois University for a tournament against 20 colleges and universities. Of the two teams, one made it to the quarter finals and the other to the semi-finals.

Gina Borg and Kent Stotler went to the quarter finals, which consists of the top eight teams. They lost in a 2-1 decision to Loyola University of Chicago.

Stotler was also named as the second best debater of the tournament.

Bruce Williamson and Gregg Turner beat Illinois State University in the quarter finals, but lost to Sanford University of Birmingham, Ala., in the semi-finals. The decision in this loss was also 2-1.

In this weekend's tournament, held in Malcomb, Ill., consisted of 39 debate teams from 10 states.

Roy Leeper, debate coach, said the Northwest teams beat teams that included Ohio State, Wayne State, Southwest Missouri State, Central Missouri State and came out ahead of Indiana University.

Next weekend, the debate team will be sending three junior varsity teams to a tournament at Johnson County Community College in Overland Park. These three teams will consist of six different debaters.

Cheerleaders attend camp, win award

With only two returning members, the varsity cheerleading squad came through with an award of excellence rating at a camp they attended Aug. 11 through 14 in Ames, Iowa.

"We wanted to attend a smaller camp for the extra attention," said Karan Staples, co-captain. "John Thompson and I were the only two returning varsity members and we all needed to learn together."

The squad has 13 members, Kelley Deveney, Sue Ann Droghei, Terri Earl, Diane Nelson, Jill Searcy, Karan Staples, co-captain; Jon Cundiff, Kenny Debane, Brian Ebert, Mike Settles, John Thompson, co-captain; Beth Brown and Matt Watson. Injured at camp, Gary Workman is out for the season with a knee injury and Searcy is temporarily out, also with a knee injury.

Since there are only four home football games this season, the cheerleaders will be trying something new.

"We've come up with what we call an un-football game. During the away Central Arkansas game on Sept. 27, the cheerleaders and steppers will be in the Rickenbrode Stadium with a live broadcast of the game by KDLX and disc jockeys from KY102," Staples said. "The KY102 van will be there giving away albums and we also have extended invitations to area high school cheerleading squads to come. They will be allowed a five-minute presentation and a trophy will be awarded to the best one. We hope to have the excitement of a real game and attract some usual suitcases."

Campus registration ends voting excuses

There is no excuse for any NWMSU student to pass the opportunity to vote this year. Student Senate made voting even easier by bringing registration right to the campus.

One of the most common excuses, "but I'm not registered yet," is a poor one for students since anyone who ever goes to the Student Union or the high rise cafeteria could not miss the registration. It took only a student I.D. or driver's license and very little time to become a registered voter in Nodaway County. Students could even transfer their voting registration from their hometown to Nodaway County. Since most students live in Maryville during election time, this makes a lot of sense.

Another common student excuse is the hassles of voting absentee. Since Student Senate offered local registration, there should be no need for students to figure out a way to absentee vote in their hometown. Absentee voting always puts a damper on voting since by the time an absentee vote is counted, the election results are already final. In Nodaway County, the votes will be counted along with the rest of the nation's votes.

Apathy is a major problem across the nation and especially on college campuses. Some polls have revealed that a big reason is inconvenience. But after this week, absentee voting or registration should not be a problem in Maryville.

United States needs people, not weapons

The explosion at a Titan II missile site in Arkansas was caused by a dropped wrench. The wrench punctured the missile's fuel tank which exploded a few hours later. The blast resulted in the death of an Air Force sergeant and the injury of 22 others at the underground site.

Even more ominous is the fact that transcripts of radio transmissions indicate the nuclear warhead attached to the missile could not be located after the explosion. Unidentified sources said that the warhead was thrown 300 to 400 feet from the missile site.

Clearly, the threat of disaster from nuclear weapons extends not only to those of the Soviet Union, but to our own nuclear arsenal, as well.

Earlier this year, Strategic Air Command computers falsely indicated a nuclear attack from the Soviets. Fortunately, the error was corrected and a potential holocaust was averted.

How long can we rely on luck to save us from the horrors of a nuclear catastrophe? How safe are we from ourselves?

In the midst of the militaristic miasma blanketing Washington, our nation's leaders should reassess what's at stake when we base our well-being on weapons of such massive destruction. Is our strength in our weapons, or in our people?

The Stroller

Although everyone knows it's the frats that are having problems keeping their parties free of legal problems, your Hero found a type of party that is quite a bit wilder and possibly more illegal. This is, of course, the private party thrown by people of a certain major. In the end, riff-raff of all walks of life end up ambling in.

Last Friday night your Stroller attended a party for members of his particular major (for the time being at least) that turned out to be quite a bit wilder than any imaginable frat party could become. Most of these parties are BYOB, so the collection of different kinds of alcohol is astounding. Some of the more refined parties brought high class drinks like strawberry daiquiris or pina colodas, but your unrefined Hero stuck to beer.

Your hero's first problem of the night was in obtaining his favorite beverage. Since your man found himself in the state of Iowa on Friday afternoon, he decided to purchase his beverage there. He stopped at a local liquor store and began cruising the aisle for the cheapest bargain. After passing up Buckhorn and Uncle Arnold's Homebrew, he settled on the generic label beer, which was only $1.75. Your Hero's next problem was with the dim-witted liquor vender across the counter.

"Could I have a 12-pack of beer, please?" asked your Stroller simply.

"What kind of beer would you like?" asked the slow salesman.

"Beer beer," replied your hero.

"Well, we have Coors, Miller, Schlitz, Oly, Falstaff, Buckhorn, Old Style, Blue, Old Mil..."

"I just want some plain label beer," said your frustrated Stroller. "The kind that says 'beer' on it in black and white."

"Oh, you mean generic beer. Why didn't you say so?" asked the clerk.

By this time the whole ordeal had driven your Hero to drink, so he paid for his 12-pack of "beer" and ran. He was ready for a quiet party of intellectual discussion with his closest friends and associates.

When your Stroller first arrived at the party, he was met with all the regulars plus a very few newcomers. This did not seem too strange. But when one of his most disliked instructors walked in (empty-handed, of course), he knew the party was headed downhill fast.

The first thing this instructor did was to find an empty glass and begin filling it with anything he could find. After consuming five assorted beverages in less than an hour, Professor X began to make sense to your hero for the first time ever. This guy was not such a bad guy after all, under the right circumstances-intoxication.

Up until now, things at this quiet intellectual party had been flowing smoothly. But, one of the girls your Stroller had thought he was flirting with vanished outside with one of the more seedy men. Your Hero had first noticed this damsel because of the shiny, shockingly bright tutti-frutti blouse she had been wearing. Oh, well, your hero thought, they're probably just going for a leisurely stroll around the block. After several minutes of waiting for this sweet innocent thing to return, your Stroller began to doubt her sweetness or innocence. After a good half hour, he had written her off. It was then that the girl in the bright shirt rounded the corner with her escort and your Stroller began to think better of her. But, wait, she was no longer wearing her bright shiny blouse, but instead a blue flannel shirt.

Now your hero thought this was very strange, until he saw the young man accompanying her was now wearing her shirt. What a strange party game, thought your Stroller.

From this incident on, the party began to get wilder and wilder. While the man in the girl's shirt ran around singing about the nuclear power threat, other parties were working hard at getting Professor X plastered and pushing him off the two-story porch (they had a test on Monday). With all this going on, it was several minutes before your Hero noticed the arrival of "The Leeches."

"The Leeches" are people remotely connected to your Stroller's major who also show up at these BYOB parties empty-handed. Now, it was bad enough when Professor X showed up bottleless, but when the 17 leeches showed up in the same condition, it was worse. They made a beeline for the refrigerator, which was empty except for your hero's and his close friends' beer or alcohol.

It usually takes a lot to get your Stroller angry, but when it comes to beer, he doesn't take anything off anybody. This was war! Your hero grabbed the first one and kicked him just hard enough to land his head in a very messy trash can. Next, while they were still off-guard, your hero shoved another one into the guacamole dip and sent a third leech into a pile of empty cans.

This was the closest your man had come to a fight since first grade when he hit a little girl over the head with his lunchbox, so he decided he had better make a fast escape. Grabbing what was left of his "beer," your hero leaped through the back door and onto the porch. Looking back he found that a very angry man (with green dip all over his face) was headed straight toward him. Another one was leading a whole herd of leeches up the porch steps carrying bottles and swizzel sticks. Your Stroller swallowed his pride, made an Evil Kneivel dive over the porch rail and prepared for a sudden death on the hard ground below. THUD! CRASH!

Your hero found himself in a lot of pain, but still alive. Luckily, his fall had been cushioned by a thorn bush. He jumped to his feet, gathered up his black and white cans and made a mad dash for the Lemon. This was the second time in two weeks your Stroller had found himself running for his life away from a party.

Once again, the faithful Sunkist Super Lemon did not fail your man in his time of need. It started like it was in a battery commercial and allowed your man to escape back to campus.

Maybe your hero had taken a few chances in his valiant fight, but John Wayne always said, "Sometimes a man's gotta fight for his rights." Or was it Garry Cooper?

Letters to the Editor

Editor:

Why I continue to do it, I don't know. But I just finished reading this week's "Reflection and Review" in the Northwest Missourian. I have written before and attempted to point out the other side of what Ken Wilkie says in the column, and I could do so again. However, that is not my purpose this time. The only thing I will say about this week's column concerning Carter, Reagan and Anderson is this: I have no doubt that John Anderson will receive some votes this November. But when it comes right down to it, he has probably seen his day in the sun and people will not vote to let him continue his ego trip. As for Carter and Reagan, we've had a clown for four years, why not try an actor?

But I have digressed. My main point in writing was just to say that I, for one, would like to see more "Reflection and Review" in Ken's column. If he decides to continue writing the way he has, then I suggest a change of title. Call it what it is. Either "Anderson for President" or "Anybody but Reagan." At least we wouldn't be deceived by the title and we won't have to worry about expecting any serious "Reflection."

Sincerely,

Clark W. Hart

Editor:

In the letter you published in the last issue, it seems that the men of the Phi Sigma Epsilon fraternity have done well in their freshman English classes. They praise the freshmen for being "apprehensive and cautious" about rush, pledgeship and fraternity life and loyalty and defend them against the accusations of being "naive and stupid." But in reality, they are only taking advantage of the Northwest Missourian to help convince those poor apprehensive and cautious freshmen that if they pledge the Phi Sig fraternity, the "inside" help, fun times and advantages will be endless. It's straight to the top with Phi Sig's or frat life in general, right men?

Freshman--What does the word fraternity really mean to you? Does it represent an easy way of making good grades and honestly getting to know your instructors, with the help of your frat brothers to back you up? Or would you feel better about yourself if you earned these high merits on your own? After all, you can only be a freshman for nine months and those shunned feelings of apprehension, caution, stupidity or whatever will surely disappear!

Does fraternity life mean going to the library with your "brothers" so they can share their "inside" knowledge with you about upcoming tests? After all, they have experienced the same classes and exams and of course, they're members of the prestigious and famed fraternity, so surely they know best.

Don't let all the empty promises of glamour, glitter and test copies keep you from seeing what fraternities really are. If you came to NWMSU for a good time and an easy way to get through--then count your pennies, iron your button-down shirts, buy a new car, join A.A.--and GOOD LUCK ON BID DAY!!!

Realistic about UTOPIA

Campaign '80

In analyzing any president's term in office to decide whether he is worthy of re-election, it is imperative to not only view his personality and record, but to look at how he has worked with the inner workings of the government. For President Jimmy Carter, that part of the presidency is the weakest, as his relationship with Congress is nothing short of bad.

The real shame is that Carter is a Democrat and Congress is Democratically controlled. It is sad to think that he cannot work well with members of his own party. But where the real problem lies is that the Administration and Congress are not thinking about the good of the American people, but more for their own benefit.

Party politics play a large part in whether or not policy is adopted or changed. The Carter administration loves to play the game and this has lost him some votes of support throughout the country.

First of all, the primary season saw Carter sit in the White House while Sen. Edward Kennedy and the other members of the primary votegetters team stumped from the snows of New Hampshire to the sands of California to sell themselves to the American voter. According to Carter, the Iranian Hostage Crisis was just too much work for him to leave. Well, after 320 days of the "crisis," the hostages are still not out of Iran and Carter is still not out of the White House.

Reflection and Review

Now, Carter refuses to participate in the first debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters, stating that he wants to participate in a one-on-one debate with Ronald Reagan and not a three-way debate which would also include John Anderson.

It does not take too much remembering back to 1976 when candidate Carter threw mud into the face of Gerald Ford for not being over-anxious to step out of the White House to campaign. Ford did campaign, but not quite as extensively as Carter did. Well, for some reason, when the Ford campaign began to pick up momentum, Carter changed his mind and decided perhaps Ford was not a good president because he spent his time campaigning and not being president.

It was very difficult to understand Carter in 1976, and even today it is an- using to see how Carter uses political tactics for his own benefit.

What is really sad is that Carter sold himself back then as a moral, honest and decent man who was on the outside of Washington looking in. Well, the fact is that Carter has become a part of the establishment which he shook his fist at in 1976.

The question we must answer is whether Carter justly deserves another four years in office. Looking at the Republican alternative, the answer must be yes. Looking at the Independent candidate, the answer would be no. But whatever happens on Nov. 4, it is more than likely that the past four years in the administration of Jimmy Carter will go down as years that saw a man who tried but couldn't do it.

Incoming freshmen of 1981

English releases general education requirements

Dr. George English, vice president for academic affairs, has released a detailed chart explaining the new general education requirements. These new requirements will be for incoming freshmen in the fall of 1981.

The change will not affect any student registered before the fall of 1981, but if those students wish to switch to the new general education requirements, they must take the entire general education package, not just a few classes, English said.

The package consists of two options. The first option is for a B.A., B.S. or B.S. in secondary education majors. The second option is for a B.S. in elementary education and a B.S. in elementary and secondary education.

"Option is not quite the right word since it is not a real option," said Dr. Peter Jackson, associate dean. "It's all dependent on their degree. Variations are built in to suit whatever degree they're pursuing."

Jackson said the B.S. degree in nursing and the B.T. degree in medical technology is still the same, but its general education requirements are in the process of being changed.

National deaths bring attention

Fraternities, sororities reconsider physical, mental hazing

including independents and anti-Greek people on campus.

"They get preconceived ideas from movies and stories that told them, but the most detrimental thing on this campus to fraternities is independents that don't like fraternities," Battalion said. "Freshmen will hear things from anti-Greek people."

Delta Chi member Jeff Houts said, "Some people are ignorant of what Greeks really are, and they pick out the bad things because it's easy to see."

Although people seem to associate hazing with fraternities, sororities have also been known to haze. The National Panhellenic Council defined hazing as "any action taken or situation created intentionally, whether on or off fraternity premises, to produce mental or physical discomfort, embarrassment, harassment or ridicule."

Activities such as line meetings, hell weeks, dumps, personal service and verbal abuse are all considered hazing by NPC.

"According to our nationals and the National Panhellenic Council, we haze when pledges must dress in similar dresses," said Andrea Paulsen, Sigma Sigma member. "We aren't physically abusing them," Paulsen said. "We probably embarrass them, but it's not mental stress."

Because of pressure from chapter nationals, most sororities have cut down or eliminated hazing completely.

"Our nationals suggested games instead of tests to learn things about the sorority," said Teresa Bryan, Phi Mu Pledge trainer.

The national council of Delta Zeta has fines for hazing which range from a chapter being fined a minimum of $1000 and/or a charter pulled, chapter officers removed from office, social probation or just a letter of warning.

"We have to be very careful about what we include in our pledge program," Terri Clear, Delta Zeta president, said. "We have to go by the book and hazing's not in it."

Many agree that hazing is not necessary in a pledge program.

"I don't think pledgship needs any physical or mental hazing," said Cindy Creps, Phi Mu member. "It should be fun, that's why you joined a sorority."

Melinda Higginbotham, Alpha Sigma Alpha member, said hazing teaches a pledge to be a pledge.

"You don't want to teach them to be a pledge, you want to teach them in a positive way to be an active," she said.

"Anything that hurts someone is violating Alpha Omicron Pi's purpose as a sorority," said Tami Murphy, president.

Still others feel some form of hazing can be beneficial to a pledge.

"It makes you appreciate the sorority more," Kaye Corca, Alpha Sigma Alpha member, said.

"I loved wearing pinafores because it showed people I was a Phi Mu," said Ruth Drake.

"I wasn't embarrassed to wear them because I'm proud that I am a Phi Mu," said Diane Crees.

When deciding what should be kept in a pledge program or taken out of it, the actual purpose of pledgship must be reviewed.

"Pledgship's purpose is to develop the pledges' growth in the sorority, learn about leadership and responsibilities and get along with the group as a whole," said Becky Hopper, Alpha Sigma Alpha member.

In the Phi Mu fraternity, pledges are asked at the beginning of pledgship their goals as a pledge.

"Most goals girls want to develop are the loyalty to the sorority that the actives have, develop close relationships with sisters and learn more about the sorority," Bryan said. "Most girls achieve their goals," she said.

Through the years, sorority pledge programs have cut back on something in every pledge class.

"It used to be more disciplined on knowing material and respect was enforced more," said Carolyn Wasearsa, Phi Mu member.

"It's eased off enormously," said Miriam Heilman, Sigma Sigma Sigma member.

Due to the first semester pledges and sorority GPA, scholarship is stressed above pledge activities.

"Sorority teaches you to be more responsible and to budget your time from the beginning," said Higginbotham.

"We encourage scholarship to first semester pledges because they have to make grades to go active," she said.

Women rushees, like the men, hear stories about hazing.

"You read in the newspaper about how people die doing things for fraternities and sororities," Sarah Drummond, Delta Zeta pledge, said. "I was sort of scared. But I was reassured during rush when everybody told me it was against the law and no one did it anymore," she said.

Looking back on what she thought before she pledged, Corca admits, "I expected it to be a lot harder, more hazing, but there wasn't. It was just fun," she said.

Inter-Fraternity Council, the governing body of campus fraternities, does not condone hazing, according to Brad Dusenbery, IFC president.

"The general feeling is let's get away from hazing," he said. "IFC can't police hazing because it would be infringing on the private rights of the fraternity in the instance of secret ceremonies."

IFC role differently and also offers a solution to end hazing.

"Hazing will become less and less practiced because of the liability aspect," Wyant said. He also said IFC could enforce rules on hazing, although it's never been done. "According to the IFC by-laws, they can go to a fraternity that is hazing and act on it," Wyant said.

The solution Wyant offered was a change to open rush.

"Open rush would help to lessen the possibility of any hazing," he said. "The type of rush now allows for hazing because of the number of pledges. With open rush, you'd be taking pledges all the time and would be less likely to haze two or three as an entire pledge class."

Wyant also said 85 percent of college campuses in the United States have open rush.

With the type of rush presently used here, the chances of hazing being used is greater, but each chapter on campus is doing its part to phase out hazing. There are steps being taken locally, as well as nationally, against hazing. There have been different organizations and communities set up to monitor and investigate hazing incidents all over the country.

Among the steps being taken against hazing (as cited in Bauerlein's article in the Nutshell) are the formation of two-man committees of the National Interfraternity Council (NIC), whose sole purpose is to monitor and investigate hazing incidents.

Jack Anson, executive director of the NIC, says, "You can't alibi or justify hazing. It's inexcusable to harm another person, especially one who wants to be your brother. I am of the opinion that most injuries and deaths that happen are accidental. And a great many of them happen to local fraternities because there is no one to monitor their actions. But that doesn't excuse the fact that hazing is still going on. All national fraternities have initiated programs to eliminate hazing altogether within their chapters."

Another serious crusader against hazing is Eileen Stevens, founder of the Committee to Halt Useless College Killings (CHUCK), named after her 20-year-old son, Chuck Stenzel. CHUCK was formed nearly two years ago when Stenzel was killed in initiation rites at a local fraternity at Alfred University in upstate New York.

"Originally, the national fraternities observed me with caution," Stevens said. "But they've become more and more supportive of my position, and they've come to the conclusion that we are really fighting for the same thing: an end to fraternity hazing of all kinds. I am not anti-fraternity, I am anti-hazing."

Stevens formed CHUCK as a method for organizing a legislative bill to legally ban hazing in the state of New York. The bill passed the New York state legislature last year, but was vetoed by Gov. Hugh Carey on the grounds that most fraternity hazing injuries are accidental. Only seven states in the United States have anti-hazing laws and Missouri is not included in those seven.

"My administration would support a legislation in Missouri against hazing," Brightwell said. "It's important."

ant that hazing stays publicized because it keeps us on our toes."

The publicity around hazing has caused some changes and many fraternities and sororities feel they're right in tune by making various changes concerning hazing in their pledgships. Some see hazing on the way out, while others think it will be a never-ending problem.

"I think it's going out," Battalion said. "Things go in waves."

Cunningham simply said, "I don't think it will ever be totally abolished."

A special breed.

What does it take to be a Marine officer? It takes strength, agility, coordination, endurance, intelligence, moral and physical courage. It takes desire, determination and grit. Above all, it takes the ability to lead other Marines under conditions of extreme stress. In short, it takes a special breed of man. If you have what it takes, we'll bring out the best in you. ## Student Union Board sponsors jazz drummer

Buddy Rich and the Buddy Rich Big Band will be performing in concert on campus at 8 p.m. Sept. 29 in Lamkin Gymnasium.

Rich, better known as Mr. Humble, is one of the world's best jazz drummers. He has performed with such well-knowns as Tommy Dorsey, Frank Sinatra and Bunny Berigan. Recently, Rich displayed his talent doing guest shots for the "Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson.

The University's Student Union Board and the department of music will sponsor his exhibition.

"He's an outspoken person, energetic and always on the go. This attitude shows in his playing," said Bill O'Hara, music instructor.

Rich began his jazz career in 1938 and before forming his own jazz band in 1946, performed in various jazz bands throughout the country.

During the 1950's, he accepted an offer from Norman Granz to join the touring jazz of the Philharmonic troupe. Meanwhile, he was in the spotlight on 52nd Street in New York as he introduced and founded the new music called Bebop, later shortened to bop.

In 1966, Rich once again formed a big band and in 1967 was selected by Jackie Gleason as a regular on his summer replacement TV series.

With few interferences since that time, Rich has continued with the big band format, playing contemporary jazz. And the jazz fans of Northwest Missouri will have an opportunity on Sept. 29 to enjoy the music of Buddy Rich.

Out and About

Rich concert to begin at 8 p.m.

by Tammy Calfee

NWMSU will host Buddy Rich and the Buddy Rich Big Band at 8 p.m. Sept. 29 in Lamkin Gym.

General admission is $5 at the door. The concert is being sponsored by Student Union Board and the music department.

The theatres in Maryville are featuring different types of entertainment this week with the Missouri Twin Cinema showing Smokey And The Bandit II and Dressed To Kill while the Tivoli will be presenting the ever popular movie, Gone With The Wind.

Smokey and The Bandit II, starring Burt Reynolds, takes up right where the first Smokey movie left off.

Bandit and Buford T. Justice, played by Jackie Gleason, are at it again. This time the stakes are a little higher and the freight is a little heavier.

Reynolds, Jerry Reed and Sally Field pair up as Bandit, Cledus and Carrie to deliver their live freight from the Miami docks to Dallas in time for the Republican National Convention.

Sheriff Justice has different ideas for Bandit and his partners. To ensure the catch of Bandit, Justice calls in his two identical brothers, Reggie and Gaylord, also played by Gleason. Together, this set of 'law-and-order-loving triplets' chase Bandit halfway across the country.

Also featured again from Smokey I are Paul Williams and Pat McCormick as Little Enos and Big Enos.

Smokey starts at 7:45 p.m. Sept. 25 and it will run for an extended engagement.

The movie is rated PG.

Dressed To Kill will be the other film shown at the Missouri Twin Cinema next week.

The new movie starts Michael Caine, Angie Dickinson and Nancy Allen. A vicious killer is revealed, her name is Bobbi and she is out to get anyone that gets in her way.

Filmways Pictures present this terrifying suspense drama and it is rated R.

Dressed To Kill starts at 8:15 p.m. Sept. 25 and will run through Oct. 2.

One of the best motion pictures ever made, Gone With The Wind, will be shown at 8 p.m. Sept. 24-Oct. 2 at the Tivoli Theatre.

Gone With The Wind, starring Clark Gable as Rhett Butler and Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara, has won 10 academy awards and this marks the sixth re-release of the picture.

The three hour and 40-minute film recreates the problems in the South during the Civil War.

This film is for the general audience. The University Cinema will begin at 7 p.m. Sept. 25 with the showing of 1941 in the Horace Mann Auditorium.

The movie will run Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights with $1 admission.

The Nodaway Arts Council will begin its series at 7:30 Sept. 29 in the basement of the Maryville Public Library.

The movie will be Waterhip Down.

The Golden Spike Disco will offer a lot of entertainment this weekend as they feature two rock-n-roll bands.

"Legend" will play from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Sept. 25-26.

"CRC" will play Sept. 27 also from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Book Review

'Class Reunion' college soap

By Mark Zeltner

Rona Jaffe's Class Reunion is another of the many attempts of authors to document the effects of college on a person's life. While not particularly illuminating, Jaffe's book is still an entertaining piece of work.

The story revolves around the lives of four women from the Radcliffe class of 1957 and their reunion 20 years later. As in all novels such as this, each woman has her own embarrassing secret she must carry throughout her college years.

Annabel is a beautiful redhead who makes the social blunder of engaging in premarital sex before it becomes fashionable. Emily is the Jewish girl who wants to become a doctor, but settles for being a housewife and having a nervous breakdown. Daphne is the perfect blonde bombshell who is afraid to tell anyone she is epileptic for fear of ruining her perfect image. Chris is the homely intellectual that has a crush on closet homosexual Alexander English. Mixed with this unlikely assortment is a number of young men with multitudes of romantic entanglements.

If these characters seem to be jumping out of the latest episode of "All My Children" or "Another World," then you've probably got a good idea of the literary aspirations of this book. It is pure soap opera, slick and well-written, but soap opera, just the same.

In fact, Jaffe seems far too concerned with tying up all the knots in the conclusion of the book. In the final chapter, which is the class reunion, all of the women finally decide to confront the problems that started in college and meet with mixed results. The only similar conclusion that the women reach is that the problems that seem to plague college students look pretty ridiculous 20 years later. Jaffe does seem intent on eventual punishment for the overly pretty and cruel women in the book and eventual reward for all of the homely, hard-working women. Perhaps this is quiet revenge on the women Jaffe knew during her own days at Radcliffe.

In the final analysis, Jaffe's Class Reunion is intermittently as exciting, mundane and occasionally ridiculous as college life itself, and that is the ultimate success of the novel.

Album Review

By Jim Kirkpatrick

The Cars have returned to the music scene with their long awaited third album "Panorama." This album is just that—a panorama of exotic sounds and lyrics which seem to be one step ahead of its time.

The Cars brought their new wave sounds to the American airwaves with their 1976 debut album "The Cars". The album included two singles: "My Best Friend's Girl" and "Just What I Needed," which carried the torch for most of today's new wave bands.

Their second album, "Candy-O," hit the record stores in the summer of 1979. This album carried the new wave one step further and was quite a change from the debut album. Even though it was largely FM-orientated, a hit single, "Candy-O," emerged from this package.

This brings them up to their recently released third album "Panorama." The album opens with the title track "Panorama," which sets the tone of the album. It is somewhat like some of the material from the "Candy-O" album, but it seems to make that album seem almost obsolete.

"Touch and Go" has been receiving quite a bit of FM airplay. This is one of the better songs on the album and it could quite possibly crossover as an AM hit.

"Gimme Some Slack" helps raise the futuristic sounds to another level. Keyboard player Greg Hawkes takes all of us into some new dimensions.

"Don't Tell Me No," a song about your very own party, is the best song on the album. With lyrics like: "it's my teardrop emotional smoke/it's my mercy it's my plan/I want to go to futureland/" you know that this is the Cars at their best. When the Cars go to Futureland they seem to bring the rest of us along for the ride.

"Getting Through" ends side one with an anti-commercial theme. The Cars make a statement with this one.

Side two opens with "Misfit Kid," a song which may be the 1980's punk anthem. With lyrics like "I dream frequently sometimes they come out funny/I live with absurdity always warm and runny/all these parties get so ritual/lonely hearts and aces/always pushing always pulling always in the races," this song is easily relatable to any punk.

"Down Boys" is a rocker about a girl who just can't seem to make it with the guys she wants to, no matter how hard she tries.

The album's only real dud is "You Wear Those Eyes," which should have been left in the studio. It doesn't have the same feel of the other cuts in this package.

The Cars partially redeem themselves with the last two songs on the album, "Running to You" and "Up and Down." Both deal with boy-girl relationship problems.

The Cars have once again turned out a good album. Right now the Cars are keeping big off their new wave sounds, but the day will come when they are outdated. Like Chuck Berry and the Beatles, the Cars are pioneers of their brand of music.

The Cars will be appearing in concert Oct. 8 at Kemper Arena in Kansas City, with special guest the "Motels".

Cathy Fair said that the experience of participating in a beauty pageant really forces you discipline yourself and to work for something you really want. [Missourian Photo/Nick Carlson.]

Beauty pageant proves beneficial for Fair

By Ken Wilkie

For many, it's nothing more than a parade of women flaunting their bodies, but for Cathy Fair, the Miss Missouri Scholarship Pageant was an experience she will not likely forget in the years to come.

Fair entered the Miss Missouri contest after she was crowned Miss Audrain County last year. During that time, she prepared vigorously for the pageant by giving speeches in surrounding communities, practicing her singing and being overall aware of what was going on around her—not only in Missouri, but the world as well. This awareness came in handy for Fair as the judges interviewed the contestants to more or less see how they could think.

"The interviews were good because it put you on the spot and tested your ability to think," she said. "They would ask questions concerning my political beliefs, not so much to learn my opinion, but more to see if I had an opinion."

There were also informal interviews which rotated from judge-to-judge which helped put the judge and contestant on a one-to-one basis.

"I really enjoyed those interviews because it helped me know the judge as a person and not just as someone who would be watching me constantly," she said.

Yet during those final interviews, Fair had a feeling she had not been selected as a finalist.

"I felt that I wasn't selected even before they announced the finalists," she said. "I think you know when something like that happens. Sure I was disappointed when I wasn't up there because I very much wanted to be. But the amount of work and desire that you put into something like that doesn't guarantee success."

But Fair is glad for what she did do and even though she wasn't successful in the fact that she was not chosen as one of the finalists, she was successful in that she won one of two non-finalist talent awards.

"I sang a song from the movie 'The Happy Ending' entitled 'What Are You Doing the Rest of Your Life?'" she said. "I had really prepared the song well, but during my rehearsals and during the entire week, so many emotions went through me that it was difficult to really know how I was going to do. Sometimes I would say 'look out world—here I come' and other times I would ask myself 'what am I doing here? This isn't right.'"

But in the end, Fair put all of that out of her mind and her performance eventually earned her the non-finalist talent award, complete with scholarship.

Although Fair did not receive a finalist position, she decided to attend the Miss America pageant in order to view first-hand what goes on behind the preparations of the American tradition.

"I really wasn't sure I wanted to spend the money to travel to Atlantic City," she said. "But finally I justified the fact in that I would learn from it and so it was a marvelous experience and it was money well-spent."

And thus, her experience has built a tremendous amount of respect for the entire program into Fair.

"It forces you to discipline yourself and to work for something you really want," she said. "I worked all summer long during the day and after getting off work there were so many things to do that it virtually forced me to keep abreast of so many different areas in order to prepare for the pageant."

Fair also built up an extreme amount of confidence in herself during this time—something she will be able to use after graduation.

"I really have the confidence I need to get up in front of people now and communicate well with them. For me this is great because I am in public relations."

This confidence extended beyond the pageant, as the many people who supported her and believed in her were very supportive.

"I wasn't a winner in the sense that I brought home a crown, but I was extremely overwhelmed at those in my hometown and people from 'here' that put their faith in me and believed in me," she said.

"I'm going to lay out a year from the pageant to finish school in order to put my priorities towards a career," she said. "But I will enter the pageant again in order to compete. I'm not saying that I will be the next Miss America, but it is something I want very much and I feel I have the potential to get there."

Although she was physically and mentally drained following the pageant, the drive and incentive which seems to make Cathy Fair tick has not left her.

It wasn't all work for Fair, even though she did give up quite a bit to be in the Miss Missouri pageant.

"It was really fun in the fact that you met a lot of interesting people and knew that you had the support of your friends," she said.

But the fact is, Fair did give up a lot for the pageant and would not trade the competition for anything.

"The competition creates a great deal of confidence in yourself and makes you a better person," she said. "I know where I am going now and what I want. I will go after the title in two years and will work hard for it, because you need to push for something you want."

VideoPhile

By Brian Laverly

The 10-week long actors' strike appears to be nearing its finale with the major dispute between actors and producers tentatively resolved last week.

Negotiators reached agreement on payments to actors for cable television and videocassette appearances, but other issues remain to be settled this week.

The 67,000 members of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists began their strike July 21, shutting down production of most new TV shows and theatrical films.

News and sports programming, game shows, talk shows and daytime dramas were not affected by the strike. A few prime-time series were also not affected by the walk-out: CBS's "60 Minutes" and "The Tim Conway Show" and ABC's "That's Incredible." "Those Amazing Animals" and the news magazine "20-20."

NBC has the most hours of new shows to offer, with "Real People," "Games People Play," "Speak Up America," (I said "new," not "good") "Disney's Wonderful World," "Magazine with David Brinkley," plus the World Series in October.

By adding some new TV movies and series episodes completed before the strike, NBC hopes to present 75 percent new programming through the end of October.

Thirty-five of the 53 shows scheduled for the fall season have not completed any episodes. Only six series have finished more than three episodes.

"Lou Grant," "Little House on the Prairie" and "The Love Boat" are among the series that will air the new episodes they now have available.

Even if the strike ends this month, it will probably be November before remaining episodes are available for broadcast.

The abundance of rerun reruns make a TV special even more special.

Wild and crazy Steve Martin's "All Commercials" special airs Sept. 30 on NBC.

The show features commercial spoofs for products such as Truman Capote jeans and Mount St. Helens laxative. Martin, dressed in a cat suit, will also do a tribute to finicky Morris the Cat.

"Marilyn," a TV movie about the great Marilyn Monroe, airs at 7 p.m. Sept. 28 on ABC.

The three-hour movie is based on the best-selling biography by Norman Mailer. Catherine Hicks ("The Bad News Bears" and "Ryan's Hope") stars as Monroe.

Bearcats stun Fort Hays in home opener

Donald Lott strains for another of his 96 yards against Fort Hays State as the Bearcats ran over the Tigers last Saturday. The home squad threw only three passes in the game, completing none, but gained 366 yards on the ground in the 19-14 victory. [Missourian Photo/Dave Gieseke]

By Dave Humphries

Excitement would best describe Saturday's 19-14 Bearcat win over Fort Hays State.

The 'Cats rolled up 366 yards on the ground in 80 plays to give coach Jim Redd's team a 1-2 record for the season.

"The offensive line got off the ball and blocked well," said Redd. "I also thought that Robert Chauza and Mike Olerich blocked well, as did Chris Miller from the fullback position."

Miller led the 'Cat rushing attack with 117 yards on 18 carries. Tailbacks Donald Lott and Greg Baker added 96 and 94 yards rushing, respectively. Redd thought the 25 mph wind played a key factor in the game.

"I felt we had to run because of the wind," said Redd, explaining the lack of passing on the day.

Bearcat quarterback Mike Coones, making his first collegiate start, threw the ball just three times without a completion during the entire game.

Fort Hays provided the first burst of excitement on the afternoon when fullback Robert Stewart took a pitch around right end for 70 yards and a Tiger score. The extra point left the visitors up 7-0, until NWMSU produced an effective ground attack which began at their own 42. Lott and Miller provided much of the running punch which was capped off when Lott raced in from the five yard-line. The extra point try failed and left the Tigers ahead 7-6 at the end of the first period.

The Parents' Day crowd of 7,500 had some more excitement to cheer about when Fort Hays fumbled away the ball on their own 22-yard line. The 'Cats cashed in on the turnover when Lott scored his second touchdown of the day with a two-yard burst. John Carroll added the kick and NWMSU was ahead 13-7, with 13:51 left in the first half.

A tough Bearcat defense rose to the occasion on a fourth and one situation, with the ball resting on the Bearcat one.

"The defense came to life and defended the run well," said Redd. "Charlie White, Randy Sandage and Jim Johnson all played well on defense," he said.

After the defense made its stand, the offense came onto the field and moved the ball well, taking it from their own one to their 48, until a fumble killed any threat of a score.

The Tigers, inspired by the turnover, scored six points on a Rick Mondt to Stewart pass covering five yards. The extra point put Fort Hays up 14-13 at the half.

Both teams exchanged the ball beginning play in the second half. The 'Cats moved the ball well on the ground again, got a break when quarterback Coones' pass was intercepted by Fort Hays, only to have a roughing-the-passer call rule out the interception. Keeping the ball and drive alive, the 'Cats marched 73 yards to score. Miller ran it in from the three yard line with 3:02 left in the third period. Carroll missed his second extra point of the day, but NWMSU had a 19-14 advantage.

Fort Hays threatened twice in the second half, but both times the stubborn 'Cat defense denied any score. Defensive end Al Cade sacked Mondt on the 'Cat 20-yard line when the Tiger quarterback tried to find a receiver in the end zone late in the fourth quarter. Jim Johnson picked off a Tiger pass moments later, ending any chance of a Fort Hays comeback.

"We need to improve our passing game and our extra point attempts," said Redd. "We also need to work on our pass rush."

The Bearcats are on the road this weekend at Conway, Ark., where they will face Central Arkansas. The Bears have a 2-0 record going into the game and are ranked in the top 10 in the Division II polls.

"They are a hard-hitting, quick ball club," said Redd.

Despite John Farmer's [60] effort to keep him out of the end zone, Fort Hays State fullback Robert Stewart scores in the second period. The Bearcats did come back though, as they defeated Fort Hays 19-14. [Missourian Photo/Dave Gieseke]

Soccer Club Loses

By Stu Osterthun

NWMSU's Soccer Club was defeated 9-1 last Saturday when they played host to Kansas State. The club's record now stands at 0-2 on the season.

A strong, gusty wind out of the south plagued both teams in their ability to maneuver the ball up and down the field, said Gus Wegner, head coach.

"We did better going into the wind than going with the wind," said Wegner.

The Bearcats' only goal came on an assist from Angie Howard to Indy Ananaba. Howard is one of four women participating on the team. The other three are Diane Mathews, Elaine Riley and Teresa Arms. Mathews and Howard have been with the team since the beginning of fall workouts.

In the team's first match, Creighton handed them a 10-0 setback. Wegner said the team has improved since that match.

"Our skills were 50 percent better than the Creighton game," said Wegner.

One of the top players on the squad is sophomore Greg Mattingly. Mattingly is steadily improving, said Wegner.

"Greg Mattingly is developing into a fine player," said Wegner. "He's not at his best yet, but he's quite an asset to the team."

Mattingly said he likes soccer and is learning a lot about the game.

"I came out because I was interested in a new sport," said Mattingly. "I saw the sign so I decided to try it. I enjoy it and I've learned a lot. We're playing good competition and it's helped a lot."

Mattingly mainly plays right half-back. He said the team's abilities and skills are showing up more every game.

"We were passing the ball well," said Mattingly. "We have a ways to go, but with experience against good teams, we'll eventually get better."

Wegner said the team must work on basic fundamentals before they can compete effectively.

"We do not move as rapidly as we should," he said. "We need to move to where the ball is being hit and not leave our positions so much."

Wegner also gave some strong points about the team.

"The enthusiasm and desire is there," he said. "If we continue to have 23-25 people attending each practice, we will become experienced and eventually get pretty good."

K-State had more players and more experience against the Bearcats. "We need to work on bringing the ball up the field," said Wegner. "They had greater depth than we did. Kansas State soccer has been in existence since 1961, so they're pretty experienced."

Northwest and Northeast are the only schools in the MIAA who have soccer. Central is having problems with their program and no other schools close to Maryville offer a soccer program, said Wegner.

"The problem is that not many small schools have soccer," said Wegner. "We're trying to schedule schools within distance to match our budget."

The 'Cats' schedule includes three Big-Eight schools, UNO, Northeast Missouri State and Creighton. Creighton and Northeast are the only teams on the schedule who recognize soccer as a varsity sport.

"The difference between a club and a varsity sport is the difference in budget and funding," said Wegner. "Naturally, when you have a varsity sport, you have access to scholarships and athletic money. As a club, we use club dues to help compensate for the lack of department funds."

Soccer is relatively new to a lot of people in the Midwest. Eleven people play at a time, just like football. One formation may include five forwards, three halfbacks, two fullbacks and one goalie. The game is made up of two 45-minute halves. Action is non-stop, meaning there are no time-outs as in other sports. The NCAA (National Collegiate Athletic Association) ruled that free substitution is permissible. In the professional leagues, only two players may be substituted at a time.

"Our new formation that we're going to try is made up of four forwards, two mid-fielders, three defenders and a sweeper," said Wegner. "We also use man-to-man or zone defenses."

Wegner said the two women on the team performed well against K-State. "They played quite well," he said. "Angie had some reservations about playing against men, but she was very pleased with her performance."

The Soccer Club is back in action Sept. 28, when they host the University of Nebraska at Omaha. The game will begin at 2 p.m. on the band-soccer field, west of the baseball diamond. They will not play in Rickenbrode Stadium.

Wegner said UNO will be a tough opponent.

"They defeated Creighton, so I know they're as good as Creighton," he said. "The remaining teams will be good teams. We'll have to continue to grow to become representative."

Soccer popularity is wide-spread, and Wegner said the Midwest has just recently started organized soccer. "The East has had soccer for years," said Wegner. "The West is pretty good too. We're just getting a chance to develop the last four years."

Wegner said it may be years before soccer becomes a varsity sport at Northwest.

"I don't see it in the near future," he said. "We need to be representative and we need more support and interest in the student body, too."

"We were very pleased with the contractors," said Bush. "We were very pleased with the work being done. Ninety percent has been done by our local people."

Lamkin Gym has also had some improvements made to it.

"Everything has been completed in Lamkin Gym except the sound system," said Steve Easton, director of technical services.

"Something has been added to the gym that's never been there before. Emergency lights have been added to the gym," said Easton. "There are eight in the gym and four downstairs in the lower track area. Trophy cases have been added also."

The sound system will be installed by November for the start of the basketball season. With the new indoor track, Lamkin Gym will be more accommodating to the student body.

Construction in progress

The new aquatic center is rapidly being constructed and the tennis courts will also be built next week, said Dr. Robert Bush, vice-president for environmental affairs.

"The concrete for the tennis courts will be poured next week if the weather holds up. We shouldn't count on having stripes painted on them though," said Bush.

The pool will be dug by hand which will require a lot of manpower.

Emanuele's leadership unites cross country team

After completing the Bearcat Classic, cross country runner Mike Emanuele takes a breather. Emanuele is serving as co-captain for the Bearcat cross country squad this year. [Missourian Photo/Dave Gieseke]

By Bob Dolan

The 1980 NWMSU men's cross country team no longer has the names that brought it into national headlines. Darling, Montgomery and Kelchner are all gone. Having to fill those shoes as a leader is a hard challenge for anyone, but the man who has met that feat is co-captain Mike Emanuele.

Known by his friends as "Frodo, son of Drogo," Emanuele does not seem to let his 5'6" stature bother him, as his desire to be a better runner over shadows this size disadvantage. He proved this by running second for the team at the Muls Festival on Sept. 6 at Warrensburg. The next weekend, Emanuele ran fourth on the team and 14th overall at the Bearcat Distance Classic at Nodaway Lake. Last weekend, Emanuele ran third for the 'Cats and ninth overall in the Doane Invitational. With the second fastest time on the team this year, over the four-mile courses, "Frodo" has only just become a top notch runner for Northwest.

Coming out of O'Hara High School in Kansas City in 1978, Emanuele was virtually an unknown to the coaches at Northwest. Being active in cross country, wrestling and track at O'Hara, the next step was to walk-on for the running team at NWMSU. Since everyone makes the team, it's up to the runners to prove themselves worthy of wearing the green and white colors.

The first two cross country seasons were long ones for Emanuele, with no varsity experience. It wasn't until the end of the 1979 season that Emanuele came into his own as a runner. With the help of former Bearcat Joe Ankenbauer, the two, along with sophomore Jim Ryan, began training for the Iowa City marathon on Nov. 4, 1979. The training paid off, as both Ankenbauer and Emanuele ran the race in 2:43.25, with Ryan coming in 10 minutes later. The 2:43.25 clocking was enough to qualify them both for the Boston Marathon in the spring.

With Ankenbauer gone in the spring, potential all-American Dave Montgomery began running morning workouts with Emanuele. This helped both physically and mentally.

"I really appreciated running with Milt (Montgomery) during the morning. It really took a lot to get out of bed at 6 a.m. and go out and run when it's 10 below with a 20 miles per hour wind. Milt was able to encourage me that it would vastly improve my running."

Emanuele said.

It did seem to help out as Emanuele placed fifth in the steeplechase and seventh in the 5000 at conference. What makes it more remarkable is that, the night before conference, Emanuele cut his right foot and had five stitches put in. He was voted most improved track runner.

This year's team is very unique since everyone is running so close to each other at meets.

"We've got a real competitive team with a lot of depth," Emanuele said. "This means that anyone can fill in an empty spot without the team hurting."

This type of team needs a good leader, so Emanuele and sophomore Bryan Murley were chosen as co-captains.

Teammate Steve Swanson said, "For a young man on the squad, he has great team leadership ability. He helps keep up good team moral. On days when you're having a bad day, he'll help pull you through the workouts."

A captain has many jobs to do, but most important, he needs to keep the team united.

"Being a freshman, I need to look to someone for leadership," said Tim Henrickson. "Mike is the quality kind of guy that fills that bill. A lot of upper classmen don't have time for the younger members of the team. For morning runs or someone to shoot the bull with, Mike makes me feel like one of the guys. And I guess that makes life a little easier."

This type of attitude shown by Emanuele has spread to the rest of the team.

"This year we don't have any one person that will carry the team's load in a meet," said Ryan. "We need to stick together as a team, and I think Mike's leadership and encouragement is the main factor behind the team being so united."

With the season just getting underway, there is a long time before conference. But with Emanuele leading the team, their ultimate goals of winning conference and placing high at Nationals could be achieved.

The future is still unclear for Emanuele, having not yet declared a major. Expected graduation date is May of 1982.

As for running, Emanuele said, "For myself, my main goal is to improve on my times. The only way that I can do this is with the encouragement of the rest of the team."

Bearkittens take seventh

The Bearkittens' cross country team finished seventh in a 10-team field at Drake University in Des Moines Sept. 20.

The competition at Drake was strong with the University of Minnesota, Iowa State, Mankato State, St. Olaf and Southwest Missouri competing.

A course record was set by Donna Gathge of Mankato State, in a time of 19:07. Sheryl Kiburz was the first to finish for the Bearkittens in 30th place. Vicky Gordon was next, followed by Toni Mohr, Roberta Darr and Chris Wellerding.

Coach Medford was pleased with the girls' performance, despite the strong field. "I think the girls are where they should be in performance. We will be able to peak when we want to. I think the girls are running about where they should be at this time. Overall, I thought it was a good performance at Drake," she said.

The Bearkittens will head for Macomb, Ill., this Saturday for the Western Illinois Invitational. The field will be a tough one again, with the University of Iowa and the University of Missouri attending," said Medford. Medford thought the 'Kittens would be ready to go to Illinois.

Softball team sweeps past Tarkio

By Jim Offner

The softball Bearkittens of Northwest Missouri State opened the 1980 fall season Sept. 21, with a double-header sweep over Tarkio College, 11-3 and 3-1, at Tarkio.

Senior Deb Cleveland got the win in the first contest, allowing just one hit and no earned runs in three innings of work. Becky Fortune and Paula Martin followed Cleveland's act with equally effective relief, giving up no earned runs. Freshman Tracy Leinen, who played both ends of the double-header at first base, drove in three runs in the first game.

In the second game, Northeast Louisiana transfer Mona Mossberger hurled three innings of shutout ball, striking out five and walking two.

Cheryl Nowack came on in the fourth, worked three innings, and allowed one hit and one unearned run. Tina Butcher finished the game for the 'Kittens, pitching a perfect seventh inning.

Pacing the Bearkitten offense was Teresa Gumm, who went five-for-six, with a triple and an RBI in the twin-bill. Leinen contributed with a three-for-six, four-RBI performance. Last year's top hitter, Lisa Hatcher, also came through, going two-for-five with an RBI.

Coach Virginia Gumm has cautious enthusiasm about her squad's chances for a state championship this season.

"We're going to be tough," she said. But she warned that defending state champion Northeast Missouri State and an improved Central Missouri State could pose some problems. In addition, the Bearkittens will face many Division I teams this fall.

"We play competition with all of those (larger) schools. None of them have been able to run away from us," she said.

The weather, which abbreviated last spring's schedule, could also play a deciding role in the team's success this fall.

"We've already had a couple of games called off because of rain," said Gumm, adding that the more games the team gets under its belt, the more it can improve its performance.

The Tarkio games indicated that pitching may be one of the 'Kittens' strongest assets.

"We have good depth in pitching. There are several different types of throwers," said Gumm, noting that all of her pitchers show "good control" over their pitches.

Gumm credited volunteer pitching coach Marvin Murphy with helping cultivate the team's pitchers.

"We feel he will be very helpful," she said. "He worked with a summer ball club and brought along former 'Kitten standout Teresa Wilson, who is now the University of Missouri's top softball hurler."

Gumm also had a chance to evaluate the Bearkitten offense at Tarkio.

"Our hitting's looking pretty good," she said.

Along with Teresa Gumm, Leinen and Hatcher, the coach remarked that others on the squad are making good contact and are improving.

The second-year coach noted a high degree of enthusiasm on her team. "We have a super group of girls. We think we're going to win," she said. "I hope they keep up the enthusiasm and keep improving."

What else but sports?

By Stu Osterthun

I have talked to many people who do not approve of having women on a men's athletic team. As everyone knows by now, Angela Howard and Diane Mathews started out with the NWMSU Soccer Club. Since the beginning of fall workouts, two more females have joined the club.

Personally, I think it's great. I can see no distinct disadvantages to having women participate in the Soccer Club. Soccer is no more physically abusing than field hockey, and there are women's field hockey teams across the nation.

Some definite advantages to having women on the squad is the fact that interest is being generated towards the soccer program. Since Howard and Mathews have joined the team, two others have also come out; evidence that when one or two try it, more will try it.

With women on the team, it is a possibility that next year a separate women's soccer club will be formed. This would definitely be a step in the right direction as far as NWMSU athletics is concerned. If the members form a club, the expenses would not drain the University's athletic budget, since the club would probably have membership dues. Whether or not this institution is ready for another sport seems to be the question.

To my knowledge, these women are the first ever to join a men's athletic team at Northwest. The ironic situation is that the women have about as much experience as the men on the team. Also, these women are freshmen, and they will have a few years left to develop into excellent soccer players.

If a women's team is formed next year, I'm sure that the interest will be greater than that generated towards the women's cross country team this year. There are four competing on the soccer team now, and only five women out for cross country.

Bearcats tie for first

A tie for first place was the best that the Bearcat cross country team could do Saturday in the Doane College Invitational meet.

The 'Cats tied with Kearney State of Neb. for the top position. Each team had 48 points when the meet ended. Coming in third was Park College from Kansas City.

A total of nine teams and 94 runners participated in the invitational. The 'Cats had cancelled an invitational meet at Iowa State to attend the Doane meet. The reason behind the cancellation of the Iowa meet was "because that was what the team wanted," said Richard Alsop, head coach.

"I left the decision as to which meet we would attend up to the team, and they felt that the Doane meet would benefit them as a team," Alsop said.

"In the Iowa State meet, which the 'Cats ran in last year, we would have been up against Division I schools and other bigger competition. As a whole, the team benefited more by doing well at the Doane meet," Alsop said.

Finishing first for the 'Cats, but fifth overall, was Brian Murley. Murley finished fourth in last week's Bearcat Distance Classic and ninth at the CMSU meet in Warrensburg two weeks ago.

Murley's time of 22:18 was followed by the second 'Cat to cross the line, Steve Klatte with a time of 22:21. Klatte finished in seventh position overall. Mike Emanuele finished overall ninth with a time of 22:24. He was followed by Jim Ryan, who was timed in at 22:25 for a 10th place finish. Greg Frost and Mike Still finished 17th and 18th for the meet, and Steve Swanson finished the course for the 'Cats with a time of 23:30, which earned him a 31st place.

Alsop was pleased with his team's performance as a group.

"We had seven runners in the top one-third of the entries," Alsop said. "That's what we needed."

With this co-victory behind them, the cross country 'Cats will be on the road to Kenosha, Wis., for the Track and Field Association's USA Mid-American Collegiate Championships. In that meet, the 'Cats will run their first five-mile course this season.

The sight of the TFA/USA Championships will also be where National competition will be held in November.

This is the first time that the Bearcat cross country team has entered this meet on their schedule.

Volleyball team streaks to undefeated start

By Stu Osterthun

NWMSU's volleyball team made it 15 in a row with a Central Missouri State Invitational championship and two wins Sept. 23 in Martindale Gym.

Northwest defeated Northeast Missouri 15-7, 12-15 and 15-12 in the first round of the CMSU Invitational Sept. 19. The 'Kittens then went on to dispose of Missouri Western, Florissant Valley Community College, University of Missouri Kansas City, Central Missouri and Missouri Western again in the finals. It was the 'Kittens' second consecutive tournament championship of the season. Earlier in the season, the Bearkittens won the Pittsburg State Invitational.

Gayla Eckhoff, a graduate assistant for head coach Pam Stanek, said the team played well at the CMSU Invitational.

"For the most part, everyone played well," said Eckhoff. "The competition was strong, but we came through and played very well."

The 'Kittens played the entire tournament without Angi Kidwell, a freshman from Kansas City. Kidwell sprained an ankle a short time before the invitational, but played against UMKC and Tarkio.

Lee Ann Rulla also suffered a sprained ankle and missed the CMSU Invitational and the two games with UMKC and Tarkio. Rulla is expected to be back shortly, although she has been off crutches only a few days.

On Sept. 23, Northwest struggled to win the first game with UMKC and lost the second game, putting their undefeated record in jeopardy. But the Bearkitten's re-grouped in the third set to defeat UMKC 15-2. Against Tarkio, Northwest won the first set 15-13 and then breezed to a 15-3 victory in the second set.

Kidwell led the Northwest offense with 11 kills and Debbie Scribner had five. Donna Shuh had 10 assists, with Toni Cowen adding nine and co-captain Sandra Hagedorn contributing eight.

Against Tarkio, Stanek used all 13 players available. Eight different 'Kittens recorded kills, led by Lee Anne Brown with four. Cowen had nine assists, bringing her total for the two matches to 18.

The Bearkittens traveled to Johnson County Community College in Kansas City Sept. 24. The 'Kittens played JCCC and Kansas City CC.

The 'Kittens' next home action will be Sept. 30 when they entertain Benedictine and the University of Missouri. The Missouri match will begin at 7:15 p.m. and the Benedictine contest is due to start at 8:30. Eckhoff said the team should not have much trouble against either team.

"I think we can hold our own with anyone," she said. "We hope to continue to play the way we have been. I've seen us play better than we did against UMKC and Tarkio, but we'll do well."
